

Engaging Students in the Field

200 STUDENTS LEARNED IN THE WOODS!

We welcomed students back to the woods to learn about forest resources and sustainable forest practices from professionals who work in the forest sector. With COVID precautions in place, three middle schools attended Forest Field Days over five field days.

Teaching about Forest Careers

222 HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS ENGAGED!

Our "Wood is Good: Forest Sector Career Learning" program engaged high school students from eight school districts. Available both virtually and in-person, this program builds awareness about the variety of high-demand and exciting jobs in sustainable forestry.

Reaching New Audiences

450 INDIVIDUALS REACHED!

We provided field programs to a college-level history class, middle school families, and summer campers. We devised education kits for the public library. We made a virtual program for a pre-school. We created a landing page for our virtual forestry education activities.
